
Title: an introduction

Author: Sirideain

One can hardly complain for lack of sources on the history of our land - Britannia, or Sosaria. I do believe, however, that the time calls for a unified and concise account to attempt a reconciliation of often conflicting theories, as well as allay the daunting prospect of reviewing each detailed encounter for those who wish only a bird's-eye view. Many equally credible sources are, in their key points, wholly irreconcilable though purporting to explain the same events. I cannot tell which sources are more to be believed, but what I have attempted is to create from the facts and stories at hand a cohesive narrative thread consistent with as many of my sources as can be accomplished. To this end, I offer the following.

Please bear in mind that I pretend no authority greater than that derived from my long study of these matters.

- Sirideain